

SUSS SWK502: Aisyah Family Case Formulation

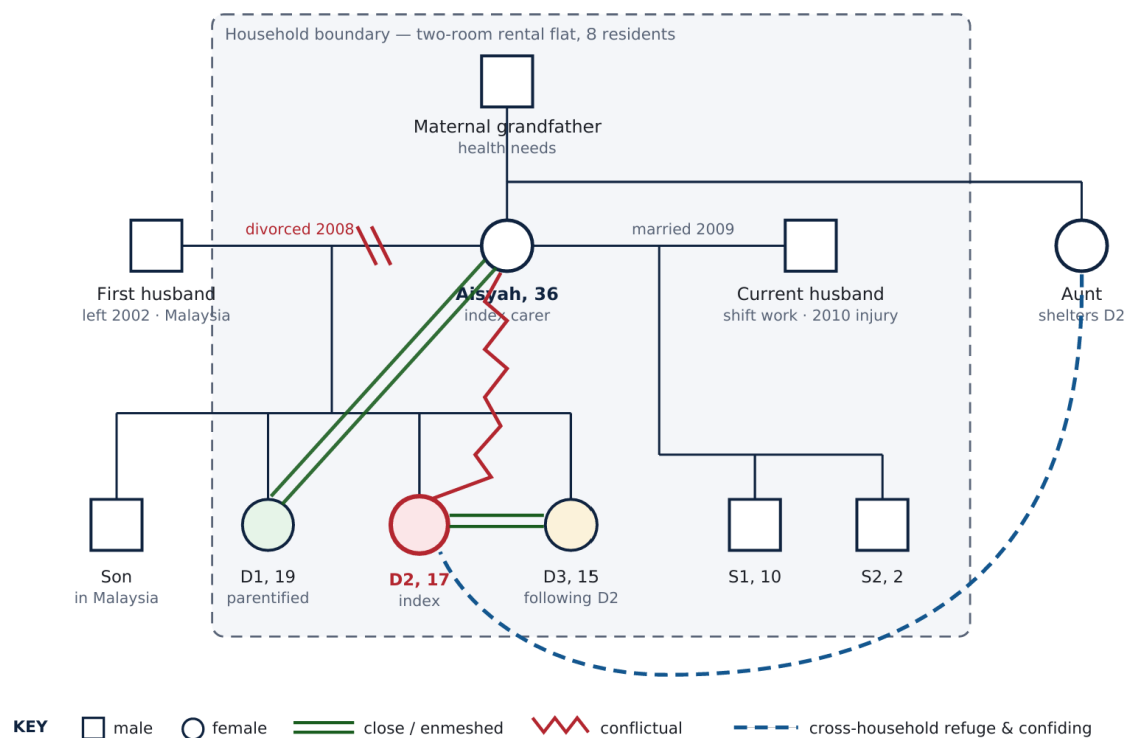

Figure 1. Genogram of the Aisyah family. The three relationship overlays are the analytic core of the case: a mother-eldest-daughter coalition that has absorbed executive functions, a conflictual mother-second-daughter dyad, and a cross-household attachment to the maternal aunt that competes with — rather than supplements — the household's authority structure.

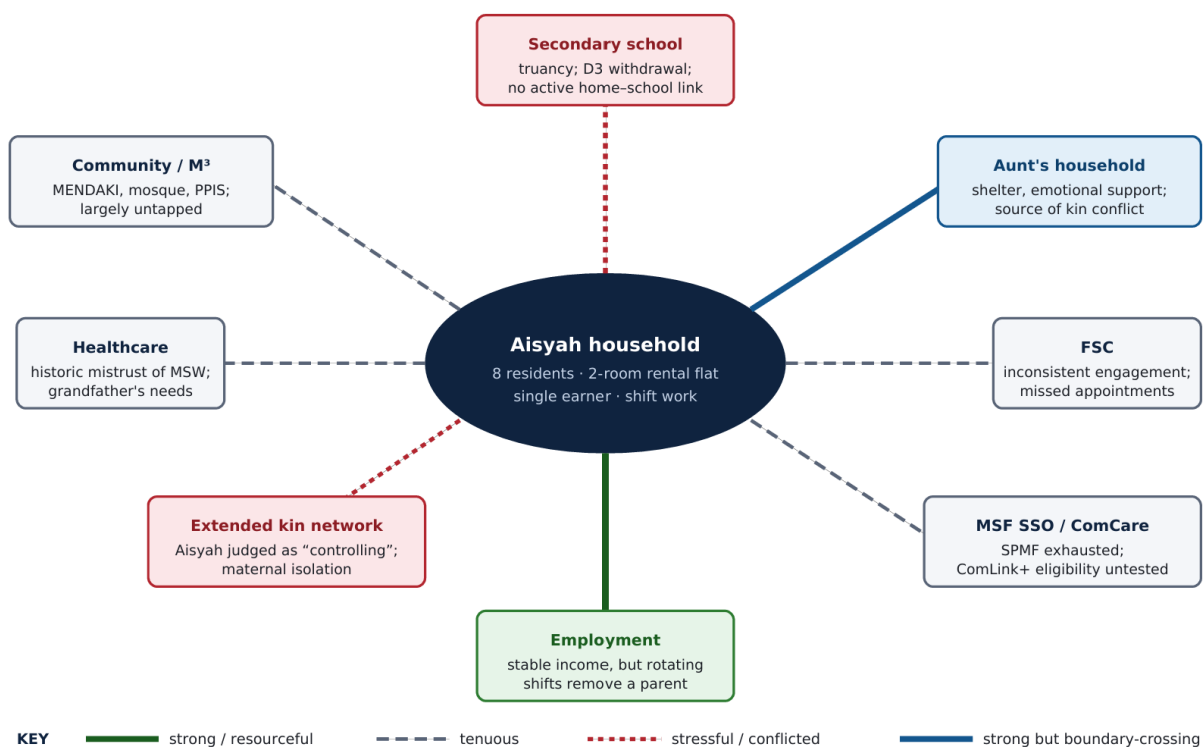

Figure 2. Eco-map. The pattern that matters diagnostically is not an absence of resources — the family is surrounded by them — but the direction of the strongest ties. The household's two thickest connections run to an employer that removes a parent and to a kin household that receives the runaway adolescent. Every formal support is dashed.
